Collection Overview

Repository: National Anthropological Archives
Creator: Karp, Ivan
Title: Ivan Karp papers
Dates: circa 1945-2012
Bulk Dates: 1969-2012
Quantity: 19 sound recordings
16.24 linear feet, 43 boxes and 2 sets of rolled maps
0.21 gigabytes
Abstract: Ivan Karp (1943-2011) was a curator of African Ethnology at the Smithsonian Institution’s National Museum of Natural History (NMNH) from 1984 to 1993. He was also a professor at Emory University from 1993 to 2011. He conducted fieldwork among the Iteso (Teso) of Kenya and made significant contributions to the areas of African systems of thought, social theory, museum studies, and public scholarship. His collection contains his research on the Iteso of Kenya; his work at Emory University and the Smithsonian Institution; his reviews of manuscripts and books; recommendations that he wrote for his colleagues and students; his published articles and papers presented at conferences; and his project files on various topics including museum studies, African philosophy, public scholarship, agency and personhood, and the history of social anthropology.
Language: Collection is primarily in English with some notes and recordings in Ateso.

Administrative Information

Acquisition Information
This collection was donated to the National Anthropological Archives by Corinne Kratz in 2014.

Separated Materials
Four DVDs and a videotape were separated from the collection and transferred to the Human Studies Film Archives. One of the recordings is an interview with Karp that Robert Lavenda and Emily Schultz conducted in 1989 to accompany their introductory anthropology textbook, Cultural Anthropology: A Perspective on the Human Condition. The rest of the recordings are of Karp giving presentations.
Related Material

Artifacts collected by Ivan Karp can be found in the National Museum of Natural History's Department of Anthropology Collections (Accession #390893 and 416181). Indiana University Archives of Traditional Music holds some of Karp's original Iteso sound recordings.

Processing Information

This collection was processed and encoded by Lorain Wang, October 2014. Amelia Raines assisted in the processing of the sound recordings. The born digital files were organized and described by Corinne Kratz.

Preferred Citation

Ivan Karp papers, National Anthropological Archives, Smithsonian Institution

Restrictions on Access

Recommendations that Karp wrote for his colleagues and students are restricted until 2061.

Access to the Ivan Karp papers requires an appointment.

Biographical Note

Ivan Karp (1943-2011) was a curator of African Ethnology at the Smithsonian Institution’s National Museum of Natural History (NMNH) from 1984 to 1993. He conducted fieldwork among the Iteso (Teso) of Kenya and made significant contributions to the areas of African systems of thought, museum studies, and public scholarship.

Before his employment at the Smithsonian, Karp held a teaching appointment at Colgate University from 1972 to 1975 and was a professor at Indiana University from 1976 to 1984. At Indiana University, he coedited with Charles S. Bird Explorations in African Systems of Thought (1980), the first of a 34-volume series published under his editorship.

He left Indiana University in 1984 to become the Curator of African Ethnology at the National Museum of Natural History. While at the Smithsonian, he served as Chair of the Ethnology Division and established with William Merrill the Smithsonian Series in Ethnographic Inquiry. It was also during this period that Karp began to critically examine museum practice, concepts of identity and agency, and systems of representation in relation to museum exhibits. He and Steven Lavine organized two major conferences on museums and co-edited the resulting conference proceedings: Exhibiting Cultures: The Poetics and Politics of Museum Display (1991) and Museums and Communities: The Politics of Public Culture (1992).

In 1993, Karp left the Smithsonian to direct the Graduate Institute of Liberal Arts (1993-1996) at Emory University. He also served as director of the university’s Institute of African Studies (1996-1999) and the Emory Center for International Studies (1996-1999). In addition, he cofounded and codirected with Corinne Kratz, his second wife, the Center for the Study of Public Scholarship (CSPS) from 1994 to 2009 and the Grant Writing Program from 1992 to 2011. Through the CSPS, he and Kratz also established and codirected the Institutions of Public Culture program, a collaboration with South African colleagues that brought together scholars of public culture from universities, museums, NGOs, political and arts organizations and related institutions (2000-2008). Karp also continued to facilitate discussions on museums, working with Kratz and his colleagues at the Rockefeller Foundation to organize a series of international workshops and a conference in 2002 on museums and globalization. He coedited Museum Frictions: Public Cultures/Global Transformations (2006), a collection of papers presented at the conference.

Karp retired from teaching at Emory University in May 2011 but planned to continue working with the Laney Graduate School’s Grant Writing Program until full retirement in August 2013. Not long after finishing his last graduate seminar, Ivan Karp died at the age of 68 on September 17, 2011 in New Mexico.

Scope and Content Note

This collection contains the professional papers of Ivan Karp, documenting his work as an anthropologist, professor, and museum curator. The materials include his research on the Iteso of Kenya; his work at Emory University and the Smithsonian Institution; his reviews of manuscripts and books; recommendations that he wrote for his colleagues and students; his published articles and papers presented at conferences; and his project files on various topics including museum studies, African philosophy, public scholarship, agency and personhood, and the history of social anthropology.

Karp’s Iteso research files span from the late 1960s to the 1990s. These materials consist of his field notes, in both paper and digital form; household surveys; photographs; sound recordings; maps; grant proposals; bibliographic research; correspondence; notes and drafts of his dissertation; and his other writings. A great deal of the field materials was collected by his field assistants, particularly Steven Omuse. Some field materials were also collected by Karp’s first wife, Patricia.

His Smithsonian files are electronic and contain little documentation regarding his administrative work. There are, however, some materials relating to the planning of exhibits at NMNH and a proposal to establish a program focusing on the African continent and the African Diaspora. There is also a memo with Karp’s response to questions from a House Subcommittee regarding the National African American Museum and complaints about the NMNH Africa Hall. Other associated materials include his research and papers on museums and exhibits. While there are no files pertaining to the first two museum conferences he organized, a folder titled “Bellagio” contains documentation for the conference and associated workshops on museums and globalization that he organized while at Emory.

Karp’s files from Emory are also in digital form and more substantive than his Smithsonian materials. They document his work on the different committees he chaired and programs he directed and founded, including the Center for the Study of Public Scholarship. His Emory files also include his comments on students’ dissertations, papers, and proposals.

The digital files also document Karp’s other areas of interests, particularly African philosophy; concepts of identity, personhood, and agency; and the relationships between international development and personhood. His work on African philosophy largely consists of files from a number of collaborative projects with Kenyan philosopher Dismas Masolo, including the 1993 conference in Nairobi they organized and the associated volume they edited, African Philosophy as Cultural Inquiry (2000). There are a few files of research on the Luo people. His research on development and personhood focuses on Africa, particularly on Kenya, and includes his papers, notes, and reference sources, which also exist in paper form. There are also files of obituaries and memorials of Karp from numerous publications and events.

Other materials in Karp’s collection include his doctorate diploma, his Master’s thesis, family photos, and a wedding album from his first marriage.

Arrangement

This collection is organized into 6 series: 1) Iteso Research; 2) Development Discourse; 3) Personal; 4) Photographs; 5) Sound Recordings; 6) Born Digital Files.

Karp first conducted fieldwork among the Iteso in the Busia District of Kenya from 1969 to 1971 and continued his research on the Iteso into the 1990s. This series contains his field notes; household surveys; copies of government documentation; bibliographic research; research-related correspondence; grant proposals; notes and drafts for his dissertation and his other papers; and maps. This series also contains field notes collected by Patricia, his first wife, and his field assistants. A significant portion of the field notes was collected by Steven Omuse, who assisted Karp during the 1980s and 1990s, often while Karp was in the United States. Randall Packard's papers and research files on the Kenya/Uganda border are also present. Packard had loaned these materials to Karp, who intended to write about the history of the region.

This series is arranged in the following subseries: 1) Original Iteso Notes; 2) Iteso Categorized Copies; 3) Household Surveys; 4) Assistants' Field Diaries; 5) Steven Omuse's Field Notes and Letters; 6) Ateso Language; 7) Randall Packard; 8) Maps.

1.1: Original Iteso Notes

This subseries contains a mix of field notes collected by Karp and his field assistants, his bibliographic research, writings, correspondence, grant proposals, and fieldwork clearance paperwork.

The numbered files were photocopied by Karp's graduate assistants and organized by subject. See Subseries: Iteso Categorized Copies for this duplicate set.

Series 4: Photographs, circa 1945, 1967-1990s

2.71 linear feet

This series primarily contains photographs from Karp's research among the Iteso, as well as photos from other parts of Africa. There are also photos of Karp in his office and with colleagues at conferences and other gatherings; family photos, including Karp as a little boy; and a wedding album from Karp's first marriage. Some of the photos were identified by Kratz; a few of her descriptions are incorporated below.

4.1: Iteso

This subseries consists of photographs from Karp's fieldwork among the Iteso. These include images of Iteso men, women, and children; villages and huts; ceremonies; agriculture; domestic work; and beer drinking. Karp; his first wife, Patricia; his parents; and his field assistants, including Steven Omuse, are also pictured.

The prints and negatives have been matched up and are organized by film rolls. Prints are not available for all the negatives, and negatives are missing for certain prints.

4.2: Africa, Non-Iteso

This subseries contains photos taken in Africa that are not directly associated with Karp's Iteso research. They include photos from a trip to Ethiopia to visit Dan Bauer; visits to other parts of Kenya, including Lamu Island; Maasai people; and President Kenyatta at a rally or festival. There are also slides of gourds by the artist Wilson Mwangi and a copy print of Mbuti boys and men that Karp probably hung in his office.

Box 36, Folder 58

Ghana, 1985

Four photos taken in Ghana with a series of notes on the back to Ivan from Michelle Gilbert. Photos presumably taken by Michelle, dates on back are January 1978 and February 198? (blurry). There is also a somewhat facetious note from 1985 providing information and provenance on a Ghanaian cloth from Michelle. Judging from the note at the bottom, this is not about a cloth going into the NMNH collection but as gift to Karp. Kratz believes it is about the kente cloth now hanging on the wall in their home.

Box 36, Folder 65 Xeroxes of photos taken for exhibition Perspectives: Angles on African Art, 1987

11 are photos of Karp, 4 are photos of Robert Farris Thompson. These were taken as part of the exhibition Perspectives: Angles on African Art that the Center for African Art in New York (now the Museum for African Art) did in 1987. Karp was one of ten people who selected and commented on objects for the exhibit. These photos show him in the collections (of the Smithsonian? At the Center for African Art more likely?) examining objects. Several also show him seated at his desk in his office at the National Museum of Natural History with an Iteso twin pot on his desk. One of the latter images appears in the published catalogue for Perspectives; the Iteso twin pot in the photo is now on a shelf Kratz’s office in Santa Fe. The original photos are most likely at the Museum for African Art.

Series 5: Sound Recordings, 1970, 1985, undated

19 sound cassettes

This series contains African-related sound recordings. Some are Karp's field recordings of Iteso stories; interviews; and music, including performances by Obasie Palinyang. A few of these are marked as copies of originals held at the Indiana University Archives of Traditional Music. There are also recordings of the "Performance in Contemporary African Art" conference held in Racine, Wisconsin, in 1985; Karp's talk at a screening of a Gisu initiation film; and a Smithsonian Radio broadcast featuring an interview with Karp regarding music in Iteso possession ceremonies.

Descriptions below are from the labels on the recordings.

Series 6: Born Digital Files, 1979-2011

0.21 gigabytes, 1832 files

This series contains Karp's electronic files, the vast majority of which are word documents. There are also image files, powerpoint presentations, and planner software files. The files in this series document his work at Emory University and the Smithsonian; his research projects; his writings; and obituaries and memorials of Karp after his death. Karp's files were organized and described by Corinne Kratz. An edited version of her descriptions appears below.

Consult with archivist to view directory lists of files, the original file structure, and Kratz's notes on organizing the files.

This collection is arranged into six subseries: 1) Writings and Projects; 2) Smithsonian; 3) University Files; 4) Recommendations and Reviews; 5) Steven Omuse; 6) Personal Files.

6.1: Writings and Projects

Archive of Publications, 2007-2008
Two subfolders containing scanned copies of Karp's papers published up to 2006. These were scanned in 2007-2008.

Papers, 1979 December-2005 May
Files in this folder are various drafts of papers that Karp wrote, as well as his columns/commentaries for the Chronicle of Higher Ed, Museum News, African Arts and American Art. Copies of some of the files also appear in other folders in this subseries, organized by topic.

Conference Papers, Notes and Talks
This folder contains a set of files from some of Karp’s more recent presentations, starting in 2006. Only two of them became published papers of some sort. The files “cape town paper” and “MuseumFrictions.AFRICOM2006” are two slightly different versions of Karp and Kratz's paper for the AFRICOM conference in Cape Town. The paper was based on the introductions to Museum Frictions. The file “Karp ethics of partnership talk.doc” is a presentation that Karp gave at a conference held in Cape Town organized by Emory’s Institute for Developing Nations in October 2007 on research partnerships and collaborations. He likely first developed and presented it for a previous occasion at Emory since the file is dated May 2007. The file “EMEA board presentation.wpd” is from the same Cape Town conference. Karp gave a presentation to Emory's international advisory board (Europe, Middle East, Africa). The file “Skidmore Conference Notes.wpd” were for a presentation he gave during a visit around the opening of the Tang Museum at Skidmore called “Transformation in the College Museum.” Some of the material in the presentation draws on other papers. The file “Chicago Conference.doc” contains the notes that Karp used for his last conference presentation, which was in June 2011 in Chicago. Kratz developed these notes and a transcription of Karp’s presentation into the paper “Collecting, Exhibiting, and Interpreting: Museums as Midwives and Mediators of Meaning,” published in Museum Anthropology in 2014 as part of a special issue of papers from the symposium “Collecting Contemporary Urban Materials for the Museum Visitor of the 22nd Century.” See also files in the folder “Project and paper notes” which relate to projects.
Karp was thinking about and working on in his last several years. He had duplicates of several files in this folder there as well.

Personhood, notions of, 2005 April
These files are notes and versions for one of Karp’s encyclopedia essays on the concept of personhood. He also included here a copy of the introduction to the edited book Personhood and Agency as a resource for the encyclopedia piece.

Museums Studies
This set of files contain Karp’s writings, notes, and research for his museum studies projects. It includes files from his joint research with Kratz, including the 2000 to 2006 workshops and conference sponsored by the Rockefeller Foundation. Additional museum-related files can be found elsewhere in this subseries and in Subseries: Smithsonian.

This folder seems to consist of a paper presented at a conference in March 1990 (IDENTITY.LEC) and a series of notes related to the paper’s themes, but with file dates that post-date the lecture file. The conference seems to have been at the Smithsonian, based on internal references. It’s highly possible that this was part of Karp’s presentation at the Museums and Communities conference, which took place in March 1990 at the Smithsonian. The notes are partial outlines or short segments of text or copied sections of articles that Karp planned to use or quote. Some of these notes files are duplicative, but not identical. The file called IVAN is a compilation of many of the notes.

The general themes of the paper and the notes include concepts of identity and personhood, processes of identity formation, and the ways that systems of representation and politics and power entwine. They also engage debates around multiculturalism that were prominent at the time. The paper (IDENTITY.LEC) was not published, but some material from that and the notes were eventually worked into several publications: his two essays in Museums and Communities and “Reflections on the Fate of Tippoo’s Tiger” (Karp and Kratz). Some illustrations and stories in the paper vary from the ones Karp used in published work.

This folder may be titled ACLS because Karp gave a lecture for ACLS around that time. From 1988-92, he was Chair of the SSRC/ACLS Joint Committee on Africa-Rockefeller Foundation Fellowship Program for Research and Training for Social Scientists in the Natural Sciences. In this capacity he would have been in regular contact with people from all three foundations (ACLS, SSRC, Rockefeller).

Bellagio, 2000 July-2006 September
This folder and its subfolder contain material related to Karp and Kratz’s project with Rockefeller Foundation colleagues from 2000 to 2006. The project began with the name “Museums and Global Public Spheres” and convened three regional planning workshops (New York in Sept 2000, Buenos Aires in June 2001, Cape Town in August 2001) prior to an international conference in Bellagio in July 2002. After the Bellagio conference they convened a “next generation” workshop at Emory in Atlanta in November 2002. The editorial team met immediately after the conference and then again at Bellagio in June 2003. At the editorial meeting, the name for the volume that would result was devised, Museum Frictions.

Files are organized here so that material related to the project before the Bellagio conference are in the subfolder “museums and Global PS” and material for the Bellagio conference (including planning material before the conference) and after are in the “Bellagio” folder. The material includes lists of participants, draft invitation letters, abstracts, proposals and reports submitted to the Rockefeller Foundation as well as some versions of introductions for the book and variations on the introduction that were presented both at the meetings of the American Folklore Society in October 2005 and at the 2006 AFRICOM conference in Cape Town. Also present is a draft of Fath Ruffins’ paper, which Karp and Kratz revised and edited extensively to produce the published version.

Disney, 1992 November-2000 March
This folder relates to Karp and Kratz’s research at Walt Disney World as part of their larger joint project on representations of cultural difference in museum exhibits and other cultural displays. The project was supported by the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Arts and Humanities at the Smithsonian Institution. They presented an initial version of some of the material at the 1992 AAA meetings in a session with Mary Louise Pratt as discussant (see file on her comments). The full version of the paper is called “Islands of Authenticity: Museums in Disney’s World.” A significantly shorter version drawing on that paper’s first section was published as “Wonder and Worth: Disney Museums in World Showcase” (1993). Karp and Kratz had intended to develop the rest of the paper into another article but never managed to do so.

Michigan paper, 2010 March-June
In March 2010 Karp went to University of Michigan to give the concluding talk in a lecture series in the Museum Studies program, intended to be a discussion of the preceding talks which he received as draft papers. This folder contains his notes for the talk and transcriptions that Kratz had done for him after he returned. Kratz reviewed and corrected the raw transcription files. After Karp’s death, Kratz used his notes and the transcriptions to write the essay “The Interrogative Museum” for the edited book that resulted from the lecture series as a posthumously “co-authored” paper. Also included here is an image of the covers from the three museum books, used at Michigan as part of Karp’s introduction.

Michigan_and_Berlin, 2009 August-2010 March
This folder relates to the Museum Studies program lecture series at University of Michigan held in March 2010. It includes his abstract for his talk in several formats, the set of abstracts for the other talks, and initial notes for the talk he would present. See the folder “Michigan paper” for transcriptions of the talk and the followup workshop (both raw transcriptions and Kratz’s corrected versions).

The other file in this folder does not relate directly to the Michigan visit except insofar as it arose from a discussion that happened at the same time and was about questions related to new ways to think about museums and exhibits. Steve Lavine, president of CalArts and Karp’s co-editor of the first two museum books, wrote to Karp about a potential conference in Berlin to rethink ways to install ethnographic collections and other transformations in museums. The file includes the email correspondence and Karp's initial ideas about the issues to address and people that might be included.

Museums, 1989 May-1996 November
This folder has files related to some of Karp's work on and in museums/exhibitions while he was at the Smithsonian and the first few years at Emory. It includes abstracts for talks (given at CAA meetings, in New Zealand, etc.); comments/memos on a range of topics, including controversy over the Enola Gay exhibit, his consultancy work for LA Festival, some meetings about exhibits, and methods for visitor research; brief fieldnote descriptions (e.g. Worker's Museum in Denmark); reviews of manuscripts and proposals concerning museums and exhibitions; and a draft plan for an African exhibition at the Smithsonian. There are also files for the Exhibiting Cultures and Museums and Communities volumes (also present in folder “PAPERS”).

Subfolder “Bushmen” contains some research that Karp commissioned from Caroline Jeannerat in 1992 (she was a student working with Carolyn Hamilton at Wits.). The four files are explained in the letter at the end of the file “INFONOTE.” Karp asked her to find out what kind of coverage and responses there had been to reports of 1979 killings of Bushmen by S African soldiers, which had been reported as “hunting” in some cases. Karp was looking into this both in relation to his research with Kratz on representations of cultural difference and in relation to the Bushman diorama at NMNH.

Subfolder “KarpKratzProjects” holds files related to joint research and writing projects that Karp and Kratz developed in the early 1990s. They developed several research proposals, submitted to NSF and to at least two internal Smithsonian funds (at least one was successful). Files relate to different versions and sections of these applications, as well as letters and comments on their Disney World paper. The subfolder “Tippoo” has various versions, draft sections, colleague’s comments and other information for what became their 2000 publication “Reflections on the fate of Tippoo’s Tiger,” which first began as a public lecture that Karp presented at the Getty Research Center in 1991. There are other Tippoo-related files in the folder “PAPERS.”

Subfolder "Tapes" are transcriptions from tape recordings that Kratz and Karp made during their research as they visited museums and exhibits – the Field Museum, the Geffrye Museum, Victoria & Albert and Museum of Mankind in London, and the “African Reflections” exhibition about Mangbetu and Azande at the American Museum of Natural History. Some are excerpts from the full transcription (e.g. “AFRICA.FLD” AND “TRAVPAC.FLD” and both part of the overall transcription “FIELD.WP”). The Mangbetu transcription ends with an interview with an unidentified woman, likely Enid Schildkrout, the exhibition’s curator. Karp wrote a review of the exhibit (see “PAPERS” folder). Some of these transcriptions were done by Robert Leopold, who worked for Karp at the Smithsonian, and reviewed by Kratz.

Real Objects, 1996 October-2010 March
These files are different versions, abstract, and draft excerpts of Karp’s paper “Real Objects, Simulated Contexts.” The paper was likely first prepared for and presented at the 1996 Advanced Seminar “Material Culture: Habitats and Values” convened at SAR in Santa Fe. Over the years it was also presented at various universities in the US, in Italy, in Bogota, Columbia, and finally at University of Michigan’s Museum Studies program in March 2010. The different versions have slightly different introductions before returning more or less to the same text.

The files here show name variations. The first, incomplete version uses the name “Palaces.” This is because some of the thinking derived from Karp and Kratz’s work in Hawaii visiting house and palace museums where tour leaders spoke about the return of some historic objects displayed as if they had been striving to “get home.” This, combined with colleagues who referred to “real objects,” drew Karp’s attention to some of these ideologies. As the paper developed, however, it focused more on different ways that art and culture and difference are shown and interpreted in exhibits. As reflected in other names here, he also referred to it sometimes as the Primitivism paper, since William Rubin’s exhibit at the Met was one of the cases examined.

There are two slide lists in this folder. Kratz created the one for the Michigan presentation as well as the powerpoint Karp used for that. The subfolder “Images” contains the photos that Karp used for this talk, which were first scanned as jpeg files from their slides in November 2008. The numbers on the files refer to the photo logs that Kratz kept for their joint research. Those with a number starting KKp are from a series of single images taken from books or other sources. Files with a number starting KK# are from the series of photos Kratz took as part of their research trips.

Fieldnotes, 1979 December-1994 November
This folder contains many relatively brief notes where Karp is reporting on Teso material, clarifying concepts and words, noting historical shifts (especially in relation to agriculture and economics), recording interviews and conversations, and much else. It appears mostly to be field notes from the mid-1980s when Karp was at the Smithsonian and regularly returning to work with the Teso. He also included here a number of notes that are excerpts from reviews of article and book manuscripts. Note that the files called “FD1” through “FD4A” are field diary entries in the form of letters to Karp’s wife Patty and a girlfriend Suzette (there is also a love letter to Suzette). What seems to be a topical index guide to Karp’s paper fieldnotes files is called “INDEX” (and perhaps also “Categori”). This folder also contains an index to the papers that Karp filed with his fieldnotes and their topical relevance (“PAPERLIST”) and an index to Steven Omuse’s fieldnotes (“STEVEN.BIB”).

The subfolder “Karp_Kratz” contains just four files from their joint research project on representation of cultural difference and diversity in exhibits and other display settings. They seem to be notes in-process, as they are much smaller than and earlier than the final versions of the files that are on Kratz’s own hard disk. Kratz typically wrote up fieldnotes and numbered/logged slides for their joint work, and then Karp would add to the notes that Kratz had written up. The folder “MUSEUMS” has additional materials related to their joint work.

See also the folders “Luo” and “Af Phil” for files related to the joint comparative project that Karp and Dismas Masolo planned to do in Western Kenya. The folder “Steven” has a few letters that Karp wrote to Steven Omuse with instructions for field research.

Af Phil, 1989 April-1997 May
African Philosophy was one of Karp’s areas of regular engagement. The folder includes a number of his collaborative projects and co-authored works with Kenyan philosopher Dismas Masolo. There are several files of material for the 1998 encyclopedia article they wrote on Ethnosophistry, which includes an annotated bibliography; 1990/1996 versions of a proposal for their joint comparative project that would bring together anthropology and philosophy research in three communities in Western Kenya; and the proposal they submitted to the International Africa Institute (“IAI.PRO”) for the jointly organized 1993 conference in Nairobi from which African Philosophy as Cultural Inquiry developed. See also the folder “Luo” for a few initial research notes related to the comparative project. This folder also includes material by Masolo (with editing and collaboration by Karp) including his proposal for a fellowship at Rice University (“MASOLO.PRP”) – this is the residency that he held when he and his family had to leave the country; Karp helped to facilitate this (see Masolo’s narrative about this in his comments at the November 2011 memorial for Karp; audio available in the Online Archive of Ivan Karp’s Publications). It also includes other material that was in-process for the African Philosophy as Cultural Inquiry book, such as a draft of the chapter by Odoch Pido (“PIDO.PAP”), reference for the introduction. Karp also put in this folder two earlier essays he had done that were pertinent sources for the introduction and section introductions he was doing with Masolo for the book; his essay from the book Creativity of Power, and his encyclopedia essay on Notions of Personhood. There is also one file of other material/articles for reference for these publications.

A subfolder titled “afphilbk1” contains material for African Philosophy as Cultural Inquiry. Three subfolders contain papers for the book’s different sections and another subfolder (“AFPHILNE”) contains the introductions to sections that Karp and Dismas wrote, the bibliography, etc. These are likely the final versions submitted to the press before final editing.

Agency, 1989 April-2002 September
Notions of agency and the paradoxical relations of personhood and agency constituted another thematic thread in Karp’s work. This folder contains several versions of the bibliography that he kept on work relevant to this (and one file has labels for file folders for hard copies of the articles), various notes and jottings Karp made related to agency, and the introduction that he wrote with Michael Jackson for their edited book Personhood and Agency. Also included is an abstract for his paper “Agency, Agency, Who’s Got the Agency?” presented at the 1995 AAA conference (session organized by Laura Ahearn) and several versions of a paper titled “Paradoxes of Structure and Agency.” This is likely the same paper as “Agency, Agency, Who’s Got the Agency?” – the first version of it is in a November 1995 file called “AGENCY2.PAP” which does not show a title. It is possible that that version was presented at the AAA conference and that Karp changed the title in subsequent versions.

Development and Personhood, 1989 October-2001 November
Developing out of Karp’s interest in notions and practices related to personhood and agency, this folder contains material about Karp’s project and interest in a particular facet of notions of personhood and their implications, i.e. how theories and practices related to international development carry implicit assumptions about different kinds of persons and relations and how they shape other understandings. This included analyzing continuities between and contradictions in the discourses and practice of colonialism and development, and particularly modes of discipline and colonial education which sought to shape persons and subjects in specific ways. It also involved analyzing Kenyan newspaper articles and how they presented notions of development and personhood.

The folder "HICKS" contains a couple of files dated 1993 that seem to be work by a research assistant, summarizing and compiling lists of quotes from articles concerning colonial education in Africa (esp. east Africa).

Other files include various sets of notes, reading notes, files of bibliographic searches (e.g. on colonial education), and some research material Karp gathered for this project. The latter include a number of files with notes from Kratz's conversations with people in her research area that touched on notions of development. (For example, the file "Ngugi.D&P" relates to her conversation with Daniel Ngugi, a Kikuyu man in her research area.) Research material also includes an uncorrected transcription of an "All Things Considered" radio story by Danny Zwerdling. An assistant must have transcribed it since it has the sound-alike errors of someone who doesn’t know Kenya (such as Mefari instead of Mathare). Karp used this story in one of the papers he wrote under this project. This folder contains several initial versions of the paper (including a version presented at the Red Lion seminar the year Karp and Kratz were at Northwestern), an abstract for its presentation at the 2000 AAA meetings, etc. It was eventually published in 2002 as "Development and Personhood: Tracing the Contours of a Moral Discourse" (files for this version are named "knauft", "knauftnotes" and "knauft.bib" - the editor of the book was Bruce Knauft).

Karp planned to write a second paper that would have developed this further through a comparison and discourse analysis of two documents: a 1988 position paper by Edward Jaycox (of the World Bank) called "What Can be Done in Africa? The World Bank's Response" and a 1948 colonial policy document by Sir Philip Mitchell (colonial governor of Kenya) called "The Agrarian Problem in Kenya." Karp had these two documents scanned in preparation for his and Kratz's work. They are contained here in the subfolder "SCANNED_ARTICLES." Karp planned to also include with this some of his analyses of contemporary Kenyan newspaper articles.

The file "DEVHUMANITIES_ROCKEFELLER" (which Kratz renamed) seems to be an advisory document Karp wrote for Rockefeller Foundation officers in 1993, soon after the African Philosophy conference he organized with Masolo in Nairobi. It presents a series of ideas for meetings, workshops, programs that would bring humanities work together with work on development.

The files “DISDEV” and “DISDEV.MEMO” relate to a project on Discourses of Development that Randy Packard and Fred Cooper were working on with a series of workshops. Karp and Kratz took part in one at Berkeley.

This folder also includes a file called “SUBSTUDI” which is an early formulation of another thread in Karp’s thinking which looks at the epistemological and political relations between African philosophy and Subaltern Studies in India. This developed further in Karp’s thinking later and was one base for Karp’s graduate seminar “Traveling Theory” and his thinking in the mid-late 1990s about the critiques of area studies.

N.B. the folder "WAGNER" appears to be an empty document.

See also Subseries: Steven Omuse which includes two letters from Karp asking his research assistant in Kenya to record material related to the Development and Personhood project. Series 2. Development Discourse contains additional research material for this project.

Grant Writing Workshop, IRB, etc., 2005 July-2011 February
This folder contains files related to the Grant Writing Program (GWP) at Emory University and related activities. Karp’s work with grant writing, research design, funding agencies, etc. reached far beyond Emory and began before he arrived there. It became more systematic as a pedagogical and training program as he and Kratz started and expanded the Grant Writing Program over that decade. Files here are related to a) the GWP itself, including a number of versions of the notes Karp used for presentations at workshops and forums in the GWP and a handout developed from them (Components of a Successful Proposal); comments on individual student proposals that Karp and Kratz would divide up and write for students accepted into the Intensive workshop so they could revise; Kratz’s presentation notes for one forum; drafts for parts of Karp and Kratz's GWP annual reports; and their memo resigning from their work running grant writing workshops for faculty after fall 2007: b) a few files related to the course that Karp and Kratz co-taught from 2006-2011 on Research Design and Proposal Writing. (Most of the syllabus files and other material for the course are on Kratz’s own hard disk.); c) Karp’s redesign of the discretionary research funding program for the Laney Graduate School (also under the folder Emory); d) Karp’s role as IRB officer for the ILA. Another facet of this is Karp’s interest in research methods, which is reflected here in a bibliography on methods and two files that are part of Karp’s thinking about how to articulate and present research methods in humanities disciplines, for instance different ways of reading as interpretive methods.

Performance, 1992 January-May
This folder contains files from Karp's assistants' work identifying dissertations and journal articles related to performance theory/analysis in the early 1990s. The "README" file explains the Library of Congress and dissertation abstract searches represented here. Two other files seem to be logistical/mechanical ones related to definition of fields for bibliographic searches.

Project and paper notes, 1990 March-2009 December
These files relate to several book/essay projects Karp was thinking about and working on in his last years. One was on the history of anthropological theory; another related one was on the history of anthropology and social thought in South Africa. In both, notions of pluralism and the contradictory and contested/conflictual nature of social life (and intellectual life) were prominent (with Isaiah Berlin and Georg Simmel as two of his favorite theorists). "Israel.nts" likely relates to the paper by Macmillan in connection with South African notions of race, ethnicity and pluralism. The paper by Catherine Burns is on the history of public health in South Africa, specifically on approaches to breastfeeding. Karp and Kratz had just seen Burns at a December 2009 conference at U of Michigan in honor of David William Cohen's retirement. Her paper includes discussion of the roles of a number of South African anthropologists in that history, and was pertinent to the projects Karp was working on. Karp likely put the file "QUOTES" here also in relation to notions of society and human relations. Two files here relate to ongoing thinking about museums and exhibits. First is a brief comment Karp wrote on Kratz's paper "Rhetorics of Value" concerning attention in exhibit. The other is a Christen pdf on the politics of knowledge and archive access, as relevant to their work on museums and heritage, probably sent to Karp by Kratz. Another file here, "Lampl paper," is a draft paper by Karp and Kratz's colleague Michelle Lampl. They were in conversation with her about revising this paper as a co-authored one that would consider issues related to power and knowledge production in relation to the research described in the draft. Kratz placed the "ChicagoCentennialConference1992" file in this folder as part of Karp's ongoing thinking about gender. See also files in the folder "Conference Papers, Notes and Talks" which relate to presentations Karp developed and presented, mostly after 2006. He had duplicates of several the files in this folder there as well.

The subfolder here "Notes for Book on History of Anthro" includes notes that Karp had in InfoSelect that sketch part of the argument of the paper/project on the history of social anthropology. The note was originally created on 30 November 2009. One chapter of the book of essays (and maybe the book itself) was to be called "Confessions of an Unrepentant Structural-Functionalist." It would also have included the reading and work he was doing around Jack Simons, the South African anthropologist and his wife Ray. Another chapter was to be "Why British Social Anthropology Isn't British," and would look at who was in Malinowski's seminar and the gathering of people from a range of colonies there. Karp created files from the notes and added them to this subfolder.

PolRep, 1989 May-1993 January
This folder contains a small set of files from projects related to the politics of representation, including plans for a year-long seminar at Northwestern University ("COHEN2" and "SUBALTER.NOT") when Karp was preceptor for the Institute for Advanced Study in the African Humanities. The folder also contains a colleague's proposal for a related project ("HARBSMEIER"), and a brief note about representation that is also in the "MUSEUMS" folder and seems to be related to the Exhibiting Cultures essays.

Public Scholar, 1996 January-2011 August
These files are various versions of Karp's paper "Public Scholarship as a Vocation" and associated notes and resources. Karp presented variations of this in different contexts (and in different lengths – long, medium, short). It was likely first written when he gave a keynote address for the Museums New Zealand conference in 1996, later published as part of their conference proceedings. The last version of it was recast in relation to issues around the public humanities for a visit to Colgate University arranged by the Fox Center for Humanistic Inquiry at Emory and the humanities center at Colgate. That essay was published in a special issue of Arts and Humanities in Higher Education (Kratz filled in citations and completed page proofs and final edits posthumously). Other files are the varied introductions that Karp wrote for different presentations, comments received when he presented it in Jerusalem. Karp also included in this folder two files found elsewhere that relate to the notion of public scholarship: Karp and Kratz's proposal for the Emory-internal Collaborative Research in the Humanities (CRITH) and Karp's 1996 proposal to Rockefeller for the humanities residency program (also found in folders "Emory\CSPS" and "Emory\CSPS\RFProposal").

Bibs New, 1998-2011
This folder includes 7 sub folders. Dates for each: AFRICA: July 1999 - November 2001; COURSES (2 folders - Bibliographies and Syllabi) September 1998 - August 2011; EXHIBITS Sept 2001 - July 2002 (N.B. these were likely copied from another computer as most files have the same date of origin); Globalization and Political Ecology - 1 file Nov 2001; GRADTRAI 2 files from Sept 2001; MISCBIBS April 1999 - November 2001. Again, likely copied from elsewhere since most files have same date of origin; Museum Education 1 file from July 2002.

While at the Smithsonian Karp often had student interns manage a wide-ranging set of bibliographies and files of the articles listed that he kept on a range of topics related to his research. When he moved to Emory, he continued to keep them more or less up-to-date for a number of years, but as computer-based research became more prominent, with electronic documents etc. he eventually stopped. These bibliographies are a good guide to some of his interests and sources and continue to be a research resource.

N.B.: Included in the folder “Africa” is a file called “Steven.Bib” which is an alphabetical index of topics and Iteso concepts covered in the fieldnotes and material that Steven Omuse, Karp’s last research assistant, sent to him.

N.B.: This is where Karp kept files related to teaching. His course syllabi and reading lists for courses are contained in the folder “COURSES”. All the syllabi included here are for courses Karp taught at Emory, often various versions of the course.

Luo, 1989 October-1991 July
This folder contains a few files of Karp’s notes on the Luo people for the comparative project that he and Dismas Masolo planned. The proposal and further info on that project are in files in the folder “Af Phil.”

Info Select, 1995 April-2011 January
This folder contains the material for the note-taking program that Karp used regularly to keep track of things ranging from ideas for papers and research to passwords and contacts. It also seems to include the program file.

Violence, 1979 December-1990 November
This folder contains four folders related to different aspects of Karp’s work on various modes of violence and conflict, particularly wife beating. “KARP1” is the text for a paper or presentation called “Violence and Exaggeration in Some Iteso Collective Representations.” Written in the manner of an oral presentation, it discusses and analyzes various modes of representation and meanings of violence, using Iteso examples. “KARP 2” is a fragment of that text. “Parkin” is a telling passage, presumably from David Parkin, about the nature of violence. “DomesticViolence_Table” is a comparative chart for three East African societies – Iteso, Bukusa and Kuria – showing how they compare across a range of variables. This would have been related to Karp’s research on Iteso domestic violence in relation to economic and labor cycles and economic change.

This subseries contains some of the files and folders from Karp's tenure at the National Museum of Natural History. Copies of many of these files and folders are present elsewhere in this series. The main subfolder is "Af Cul Div". It also includes two other files, Spencer and Kenyatta. The former is a draft letter from 1992 that Karp and Kratz were developing to interest the Spencer Foundation in supporting their project. "Kenyatta" was text and background for planning of the new African Voices exhibit. There is also an internal memo Karp wrote concerning matters that were in process in relation to collections when he went to Kenya to do research in 1984 ("PROCLAB.MSS" – perhaps misnamed?). N.B. that other projects that Karp worked on during his Smithsonian years are contained in other folders, where he had placed them. This includes the folder "MUSEUMS", which has files from some of Karp and Kratz's joint projects, from the Exhibiting Cultures and Museums and Communities conference/book projects and some exhibit/museum related memos and notes. The folders "Af Phil" and "LUO" also contain files for joint projects Karp did with or planned with Dismas Masolo. The "Fieldnotes" folder contains files from his work in Kenya while at the Smithsonian and from some of his and Kratz's joint projects.

Subfolder "Af Cul Div": During 1992 Karp was working on a congressional appropriation to create a research program to be called variously Cultural Identity and Diversity in Africa or Cultural Diversity and Identity in Africa and Its Diaspora. In various versions it was for an initial two years or an initial three years, but planned to get up to full speed in five years and to be permanent and ongoing. These files are different versions of that proposal – a full version, the short 4-paragraph version required for Congressional submission, a version for the Congressional Black Caucus, program relevance and budget justifications etc. Some file names are based on the forms they addressed (e.g. F-2A) It was to be a collaborative project involving African, American, and African Diaspora scholars and was to produce an exhibit, publications, annual workshops and more. It was to work across Smithsonian museums, including the National African American Museum which was barely started then. The principal SI staff were Karp, Mary Jo Arnoldi and Fath Ruffins.

The proposals and memos about this program date to the early part of 1992. In the summer a House Subcommittee called the Secretary of SI to testify about the National African American Museum and complaints about the NMNH Africa Hall were raised that eventually led to its closure late in 1992. This folder also includes Karp’s memo providing information in response to questions from the Clay Subcommittee, with the proposed program as evidence of new activity and changes.

6.3: University

This subseries contains files relating to Karp's work at Emory University and with his students, primarily from Emory.

Syllabi for courses taught by Karp at Emory can be found in "Bibs New" under Subseries: Writings and Projects.

Emory, 1994-2010

This folder holds material from the many administrative positions and committees Karp chaired at Emory. The free-standing files in the "EMORY" folder concern three main projects: A) Dean Robert Paul asked Karp to lead a committee to review and redefine Emory College policies on research. support and leave in the Humanities and Social Sciences. B) Dean Paul also later asked Karp to assist Sam Cherribi in developing a concept, structure and proposal for a unit called Emory Development Initiative (predating the Development Studies program at Emory). The unit was also to raise funds from donors (the suffix JPA on one file indicates that Jennifer Arnett from the development office worked on the draft). Karp helped Cherribi with reports, drafts, proposals etc. and EDI worked with CSPS on some programs. C) Dean Lisa Tedesco asked Karp to work with Rosemary Hynes of the Graduate School to redesign the program of graduate student research funding and conference funding. Other files here are a) a draft of the terms Karp and Kratz were discussing with the dean in relation to the first retirement agreement they negotiated (this was later changed and full retirement postponed until August 2013); b) draft language Karp was sending to the Vice Provost for International concerning a letter nominating Kratz for Emory’s Creekmore award; and c) comments on the draft report that would be part of the review of the Office of International Affairs and Vice Provost for International at the time, Holli Semetko.

Kratz divided other Emory material into a series of subfolders. See specific notes on “CSPS” subfolder for the wide-ranging work done through the Center for the Study of Public Scholarship. Other subfolders:

"Development_Studies" covers some of the work Karp did as co-chair (with Rick Doner) of the Arts and Sciences Development Studies Steering Committee, appointed to develop the structure and intellectual foci of a Development Studies Program at Emory. The committee met initially for a semester, then extended. Included are draft memos for the dean to send to committee members, a report that outlines the proposed program and budget, memos to administrators to follow up on resources committed. “DevelopmentStudiesResourcesFlowchart2.doc” adapts a flowchart Kratz created for the Grant Writing Program to Development Studies. The committee predated the Laney Graduate School’s involvement in and development of the Masters in Development Practice program. Emory College did start a Development Studies program based on the work of this committee.

"FORD" covers initiatives from when Karp was directing both the Institute of African Studies (IAS) and the Emory Center for International Studies (ECIS) (1996-1999) as well as some later, related work. This involved a number of outside foundation grants. There were grants from the Ford Foundation’s Crossing Borders program through ECIS, and IAS had a Ford grant for a program called African Initiatives in Knowledge (AIK) working with other Atlanta universities. There was a second funding round for the latter program, which was applied for, but relations in the university consortium were fraying and the other universities decided to have their own focus rather than work together (files for their separate projects are in this folder). That was not funded. There was also a second round of funding through Ford’s Crossing Border’s program in 1999. When that opportunity arose Karp decided to assist and promote a colleague to develop the next phase, so he worked with Bruce Knauft to create the Vernacular Modernities program as the followup (draft in file “fordbecky.txt”). In 1997 Karp also led Emory’s submission to the Mellon Foundation for a Sawyer Seminar; files relating to that include the overall framing introduction (“SAWYER”) and the specific proposal he developed with Abdullahi An-Naim (“MELLON_SAWYER”).
Files include draft proposals and budgets, draft text by various colleagues who were working together on the proposals and the two working groups of the Crossing Borders program (Comparative Postcolonial Culture and Comparative Development and Industrialization), memos to Emory and Ford administration, and announcements to recruit the graduate student fellows for the Crossing Borders program. Several files address the future of ECIS; Karp had been mandated to restructure it and to propose a larger organization to consolidate area studies and comparative work at Emory.

Also included in the "FORD" folder is a position paper that Karp was invited to write for Ford (the file "FORD2" is one version of it) as they were rethinking their area studies programs and funding. This was all happening in the mid-late 1990s, when there was a rethinking of area studies and its Cold War origins across a number of organizations. This paper eventually became his 1997 publication "Does Theory Travel? Area Studies and Cultural Studies".

"ILA", "ILA_CulturehistoryTheory" and "ILA_MEMOS" contain work related to Karp’s home department at Emory, the Graduate Institute of Liberal Arts. He directed the ILA from 1993-1996. Files in "ILA_MEMOS" come entirely from this period and cover routine administrative matters with faculty and office staff. "ILA_Culturehistory Theory" contains files from 2000-2001 when the conceptual, intellectual and curricular structure of the ILA was under revision, as summarized in the letter to Dean Robert Paul included. The folder "ILA" contains miscellaneous files: comments to an ILA colleague on her book proposal, an unapproved proposal by another faculty member to develop a science program in the ILA, comments by Stan Katz on public scholarship initiatives begun in the ILA from an ILA external review, a memo to ILA graduate students concerning their required attendance at a programming series on public scholarship that Karp coordinated for the ILA, a To Do list about students and recommendation letters for colleagues that Karp had to do.

Subfolder "CSPS": Karp founded the Center for the Study of Public Scholarship (CSPS) within the ILA a year or so after moving to Emory. CSPS was the base from which Karp successfully applied for a Rockefeller Foundation Humanities residency program with three different theme years. Randy Packard directed the first year, Karp and Kratz codirected the second year, and Dana White and Rick Beard directed the third. After that program Karp and Kratz jointly developed a new proposal for Rockefeller with their South African colleagues and received support for the Institutions of Public Culture (IPC) program, which continued until around 2008, with support from Emory in the final years. The structure of CSPS as a center within the ILA was renegotiated around 2000 or so and CSPS moved out of the ILA and began to report directly to the dean as a freestanding center. At that time Karp and Kratz began to co-direct CSPS and they were seconded from their academic departments to run CSPS and the IPC program and develop associated programming and teaching. It was around this time also that they developed the Grant Writing Program, initially running workshops and forums for both graduate students and for faculty, but later dropping the faculty component (see folder on Grant Writing Workshop). CSPS was shut down by Emory along with a number of other interdisciplinary programs and centers during the financial crisis of 2008-2009. CSPS closed at the end of March 2009.
Material in this folder relates to administration and activities of CSPS during its existence. This includes budget memos, files on staff (annual review, position description, RIF), some annual reports. It also includes memos and notes concerning CSPS-ILA relations, the terms of the change of structure and Karp and Kratz's secondments, as well as files related to a few workshops and speakers series they organized. Some files relate to the IPC program: lists of fellows, fellows obligations, fellows’ reports. Other CSPS activities represented in the folder: a) Karp and Kratz were Emory’s liaison to the national Imagining America program; b) for several years Karp and Kratz collaborated with the Smithsonian’s Folklife program to offer summer fellowships for Emory graduate students in Washington DC; c) Karp and Kratz held regular biweekly seminar meetings as part of the IPC that students on the program took as a course and postdocs attended as a work-in-progress seminar, called South African Public Culture. ILA grad students for some years were required to fulfill a public scholarship requirement by attending a number of lectures, events, etc. drawn from CSPS activities that were organized under the rubric the Workshop in Public Scholarship. Karp administered this for the ILA. The folder also contains files related to two Emory-internal grant proposals Karp and Kratz developed--one for a temporary funding program called Collaborative Research in the Humanities grant program (CritH) and another for a short-lived funding program through the Institute of Developing Nations (IDN). They also developed a faculty seminar on Public Scholarship through the Center for Faculty Development and Excellence (CFDE) that they ran in Spring 2011 (NOT 2010 as in the files – it was postponed a year) with the CFDE director Laurie Patton and Emory faculty who applied to participate, including a couple who received fellowships for their projects. The folder contains several files related to this. The folder also contains a proposal that Karp was commenting on for colleagues at Indiana University who were applying for a Rockefeller Humanities residency grant in 2002, and a proposal to the Coca Cola Foundation that Karp and Kratz were advising the Birmingham Civil Rights Institute about and communication about a Rockefeller proposal and grant that they helped their colleagues in South Africa (L. Witz and C. Rassool) get for the museums and heritage program in Cape Town.

The subfolder “RF Proposal” contains files related to the Rockefeller Foundation grants, including proposals from 1996 and 1999, fellows' reports and annual reports for both programs, administrative correspondance with the provost and deans at Emory about the IPC proposal, documents in preparation for a site visit by Rockefeller that was done before the initial Humanities residency program. The folder also contains proposals written by Karp and Kratz's Cape Town colleagues for several programs and projects that they created, which served as material and background for their codeveloped projects (these are listed under the files with names Witz and Bunn). Karp also kept a copy of his paper on “Public Scholarship as a Vocation” here as a resource when working on proposals.

Students, 1991 August-2011 August
These files cover a small portion of Karp's work with a small set of his students. The only non-Emory student represented here is a file of comments on Indiana student Robert Leopold's draft dissertation in 1991. The group of Emory students included in the subfolder -- Yanique Hume, Eric Lindland, Julie Livingston, Mike McGovern, Sara Melton, Joey Orr, Pete Richardson, Angela Ragan, Aruna Ramachandran, Yaya Ren, Ana Schaller de la Cova – represent a small fraction of the students he worked with at Emory. The file “Pandey message” concerns Emory student Aruna Ramachandran. They are mostly comments on dissertations, proposals and papers as well as the qualifying exams for a couple of students whose committees Karp chaired. A couple of files are documents that students had sent to him for comments. Some files represent his continued engagement with students years after they finished, e.g. a couple of files are book prospectuses written by former students that were sent to him for comments.

Karp wrote vastly more sets of comments for many more students, but before Emory it seems most were in hard copy (not present in this collection) and/or conveyed in conversations and meetings. This was also the case for the many students Karp worked with at Emory, including those represented in this folder. In his last ten years (at least), Karp also sent a lot of comments to students in email messages.

See also the “Recs” folder in Subseries: Recommendations and Reviews, where more of Karp’s students are represented.

6.4: Recommendations and Reviews

Reviews, 1980 January-2011 April
This folder primarily contains reviews by Karp of books and articles under consideration for publication. There are also a few book blurbs and book reviews. The two subfolders “IndianaSeries” and “SmithsonianSeries” contain manuscript reviews and comments for the two book series that Karp edited. There are also at least two external examiner reports.

For additional reviews, see the folder "Recs" under this subseries and "Papers", "Fieldnotes", and "Museums" under Subseries: Writings and Projects.

Recs, 1979 December-2011 June
Karp wrote letters of recommendation for a large number of people, often for many years for a range of different purposes. This folder contains letters for jobs, grants and fellowships, tenure and promotion reviews, and other ad hoc situations. He regularly wrote letters for MacArthur foundation nominations and was himself a MacArthur nominator in the 1990s. A few files here are reviews of article manuscripts. The letters were written for Karp’s former graduate students at Indiana, Catholic University, and Emory; over time they became colleagues and he continued to write for some as their careers developed further. He also wrote for a wide range of colleagues and friends in many fields. There are also a few letters for former employees.

Note that a number of files appear to be VLC media files, although they are not. This is likely because Karp used the suffix .rec in naming files, which seems to have been read as VLC at some point, though they are actually text or wpd files.

The subfolder “EmoryFulbrightEvaluations” includes a few commentaries that Karp wrote on student proposals when he chaired Emory’s graduate student Fulbright process. He re-organized the process so that students submitted proposals in advance and went through an on-campus interview with the Fulbright committee. They then received summary comments from the committee, had a chance to revise and resubmit, and the committee reviewed and ranked those final applications for submission. His new process nearly doubled the number of Fulbright awards that Emory students received. This folder has just a handful of the commentaries Karp did. More may have been in his email, composed as he wrote the message.

Restricted until 2061.

6.5: Steven Omuse, 1993 August-1994 February
This folder contains Karp's letters to and regarding Steven Omuse, his research assistant in Kenya. Two of the letters are to Omuse with instructions for field research. The third file is a letter nominating Omuse for an award given by the US Embassy in Nairobi. Omuse was second in the competition and traveled to Nairobi for a reception.

6.6: Personal

Vita, 1988 September-2011 September
This folder contains different versions of Karp’s curriculum vitae over the years, as well as biographical blurbs and lists of publications and work in progress that he provided for various projects, publications, and visits. A 2014 version of his vitae, updated by Kratz, lists papers published posthumously. This folder also contains his letter of application to Emory University and CVs and biographical blurbs for some of his collaborators.

AddressesBookmarks, 1996 March-2010 January
This folder contains contact information for Karp’s colleagues and friends as well as his bookmark file for the browser Firefox.

LetterheadAndSignatures, 1994 February-2009 October
This folder contains Karp's templates for letters, memos, signatures for letters, and various versions of his letterhead.

Palo_Duro, 2010 January
This folder contains a spreadsheet tracking the journals that Karp and Kratz wanted to donate to libraries and give to students. This file is an interim version and relates to Karp and Kratz's move to New Mexico.

Planner, 1998 November-1999 August
This folder contains files from an unidentified planner program that Karp used to track contacts and addresses and manage his calendar.

Obituaries and Memorials, 2011-2012
This folder contains memorials and obituaries of Ivan Karp. Included are photographs, poems, and tributes from a memorial day of Karp held in Amukura, Kenya; obituaries from the American Anthropological Association, Emory University, African Arts, and the African Studies Association; and a slideshow tribute from the National Museum of African Art.
