

Roles: Charles

Charles is the Anne Arundel County archaeologist (Senior Planner) and founder and director of The Lost Towns Project, which works to preserve and protect cultural resources. He holds a Ph.D. in Anthropology from the University of Kentucky. Charles has worked as a professional archaeologist in Maryland for over 20 years and has been published widely in such journals as Science and American Antiquity. A few of Charles's many research interests include prehistoric archaeology, historic ceramics, and clay tobacco pipe making.

Smithsonian
National Museum of Natural History

This page is part of the Smithsonian's The Secret in the Cellar Webcomic, an educational resource from the Written in Bone exhibition, February 2009 - 2011.