Title: Records of the Institut für Deutsche Ostarbeit, Sektion für Rasse- und –Volkstumforschung

Repository: National Anthropological Archives, Smithsonian Institution through September 2007. Jagiellonian University Archives, Kraków, thereafter.

Collection Number: n/a

Access Restrictions: Collection is open for research.

Alternate Formats: Originals at Jagiellonian University Archives, Kraków, Poland; digital and microfilm copies available at the National Anthropological Archives, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C., USA and the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, Washington, D.C., USA; microfilm copy available at the Bundesarchiv, Germany

Use Restrictions: The originals of Series 21 (Photographic Materials) are extremely sensitive to environmental conditions; recommend using surrogates for all varieties. Photographs respond very quickly to humidity changes. Glass slides are fragile; some are broken. Negatives are nitrate and flammable.

Size: approximately 45 linear feet;

Language: primarily German, considerable Polish and a little Greek

Original Processing and Finding Aid: Gretchen Schafft and Gerhard Zeigler, 1998

Reprocessed and Finding Aid Revision: Beth Schuster, 2007, in preparation for digitization

Provenance: United States Army. See “Historical Information” below for additional provenance information.

Historical Information: The Institut für Deutsche Ostarbeit opened in German-occupied Kraków on June 20, 1940. The brainchild of Hans Frank, Governor General of the Generalgouvernement, the IDO was comprised of eleven sections: agriculture, art history, economics, forestry and woodworking, geology, history, landscaping and gardening, law, linguistics, prehistory, and Rassen- und Volkstumforschung (roughly “Racial and National Traditions Research” or IDO-SRV), whose three Referate (sections) also included one for Jewish studies. The Institute took over the offices in Kraków’s Jagiellonian University, much of whose professoriate was arrested and deported to Sachsenhausen concentration camp, where many eventually died.

Dr. Heinrich Gottong was tapped to head the Volkstumforschung Referat and Dr. Anton Plügel the Rassenforschung Referat. Gottong came to the Institut in October 1940, joined by Plügel in April 1941. The Judenforschung Referat was led by Dr. Josef Somerfeldt. Because both Gottong and Plügel were frequently on active duty in the Wehrmacht, Dr. Elfriede Fliethmann, who had been with the SRV since July 1941, effectively directed the Rassenforschung Referat. Dr. Erhard Riemann assumed official directorship of the entire SRV in November 1942, but involved himself only in administrating the Volkstumforschung and Rassenforschung Referate. Staff included two German scientific assistants (wissenschaftliche Hilfsarbeiter) and six Polish assistants.

The Sektion carried out numerous investigations, primarily on the Slavic peoples of occupied Poland, from its inception until the summer of 1944. The Sektion’s mandate was to determine the racial hierarchy of the inhabitants of occupied Poland to facilitate the subjugation of the region by dividing the inhabitants against one another, and thus the region’s future administration. As Gottong put it in a 1941 article,

The work of the Section aimed at determining the actualities of the situation and special needs of life in the east. [...] Racial and Volkstum research looks at the people as a whole as well as individuals, their mental and physical qualities, their importance as bearers of culture [Erbträger], as well as the community of which they are members.<sup>1</sup>

In his contribution to the same article, Plügel added

Racial and Volkstum research assumes a special significance when a new form of state is established in which resolution—and implementation—of the issues of race and Volkstum are critical. If a new order is to bring about peace, scientific explanations of [these issues] are ... essential to ensure the value and continuation of this order.<sup>2</sup>

The Sektion conducted investigations until the summer of 1944, when the advancing Soviet Red Army forced an evacuation of the Sektion and most of its materials to Bavaria.

After the War, the United States and British Armies, with the authority of a number of Allied Control Council Orders including Number 4 of May 13, 1946, seized Nazi documents that were deemed important for prosecuting war criminals or containing propaganda regarding Nazi racial theories, including those in this collection; the Pentagon took possession of the IDO-SRV papers. After the U.S. Army had determined the IDO-SRV papers were of no value for medical intelligence purposes, they were given to the Smithsonian as a “federal institution specializing in [anthropology],” on “permanent loan.”

The IDO-SRV records were formally accessioned as number 176333 on May 27, 1947 by Dale Stewart, the head curator of the Anthropology Department. NAA archivist Jim Glenn included the IDO-SRV collection in the NAA Collection Guide beginning in 1989, but the collection was not fully processed for research use until 1998, when Gretchen Schafft and Gerhard Zeidler arranged and described it.

Over the years, parts of the IDO-SRV collection were de-accessioned from the Smithsonian and transferred to other institutions. The IDO-SRV personnel records were returned to the Pentagon by the Smithsonian prior to accessioning because they were deemed non-scientific in nature; the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) eventually maintained them. Artwork was transferred to the National Gallery and Dumbarton Oaks. The materials at NARA were repatriated to the German Bundesarchiv in the 1950s; it is planned that they will eventually be transferred from the Bundesarchiv to the Jagiellonian University Archives, where another portion of the IDO records have remained since the war.

In the fall of 2003, the Polish government formally requested the transfer of the Smithsonian’s IDO-SRV materials to the Jagiellonian University Archives. A task force, established by Christián Samper (Director of the National Museum of Natural History), chaired by Edie Hedlin (Director of the Smithsonian Institution Archives) and including Jake Homiak (Director of the NAA), Alan Bain (senior archivist at the SIA), Elaine Johnston (Office of the Smithsonian General Counsel), and Ruth Selig (Special Assistant to the Director of the National Museum of Natural History), studied the request. After consulting with anthropologists and legal advisors, the Task Force recommended that the IDO-SRV collection be transferred to Poland with the caveat that a digital surrogate of the entire collection remain in the Smithsonian National Anthropological Archives. Samper formally announced the decision in late September 2004. Generous support of the Jagiellonian University Archives and the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum made the preparation for and digitization of the collection possible. The collection was prepared for digitization beginning in the fall of 2006; the original collection was returned to Jagiellonian University in the fall of 2007.

Scope and Content: The collection consists of administrative and research materials from the IDO-SRV's work in occupied Poland. The bulk of the collection is field data and analysis, including some field data by Gottong and Plügel gathered before the founding of the IDO.

Dates: 1940-1944 inclusive, 1942-1943 bulk

Series and Subseries Descriptions

Series 1: Correspondence, Work Plans and Work Reports

Subseries 1, Dr. Riemann's notebook "Berichte, Manuskripte, Verschiedenes," divider 1: "Arbeitsbericht der Sektion Rassen- und Volkstumforschung."

Reports and correspondence from the SRV from the first divider of Riemann's notebook. Included are reports by Riemann and Plügel, as well as administrative memos.

Dates: 1/1/1941-7/21/1944 (Inclusive)

Extents: Box type: Full-size legal

Pages: 153

No. of boxes: 0.25

Linear feet: 0.165

Subseries 2, Dr. Riemann's notebook "Berichte, Manuskripte, Verschiedenes," divider 2: "Manuskripte"

Manuscripts of varying origin from the second divider of Riemann's notebook.

Dates: 1943-1944 (Bulk)

Extents: Box type: Full-size legal

Pages: 147

No. of boxes: 0.25

Linear feet: 0.165

Subseries 3, Dr. Riemann's notebook "Berichte, Manuskripte, Verschiedenes," divider 3: "Rundschreiben - [Arbeits]berichte - Alle[...]"

Administrative memorandum and materials from the third divider of Riemann's notebook.

Wawrzeczyce, Woj. Malopolskie
Witow, Neumarkt

Subseries 9, Hair samples (HP)

Envelopes of various styles and sizes containing small hair samples. Although arranged numerically and the numbers correspond to subjects in other subseries, the data are non-inclusive. Only the first envelope of each group has been imaged.

Dates: 1942-01-01 to 1943-01-18

Extents: Box type: Full-size legal                      Pages: 3010
          No. of boxes: 11                                      Linear feet: 4.29

                                      Witow, Neumarkt
                                      Zakopane, Woj. Malopolskie

Subseries 11, Dermatoglyphic Data (DD)

Three sets of dermatoglyphic data gathered in Szaflary by Dr. Fliethmann's group, German Golkowitz by Dr. Sydow's group and an unidentified location; the exact format varies by location. German Golkowitz data is on two sheets: one full-sized sheet with hand prints and one half-sized sheet with finger prints. Szaflary data are separated into finger and palm prints. Fingerprints are on half-sized sheets; the run encompasses the entire Szaflary investigation. Handprints are on mixed large and half sheets, depending on the age of the subject and size of the handprints.

Dates: 1942-06-18 to 1942-07-25

Extents: Box type: Full-size legal &                      Pages: 2243
          No. of boxes: 2                                      Linear feet: 0.99

Investigation Locale(s):     Golkowitz (German)

Subseries 20, Folk Culture (FC)

Forms with pictures of belt buckles. According to the key card (in folder 1), information about location, maker, purchase information, seller, museum (mainly from Tatra, with possible inventory number), description, mass, and negative number; not all information is filled on every card. Non-IDO marginalia is on the back. The cards are ordered by film index number (upper right); they are not inclusive. Some items have multiple reference numbers, in which case they are ordered by the primary number; some items have corrected numbers, in which case they are ordered by the correction. The cards are very sensitive to lack of humidity and begin to curl almost immediately.

Dates: n.d.

Subseries 21, Photographic Materials

Negatives, including nitrate negatives, glass slides and prints of IDO-SRV activities and investigations. Subjects are persons, landscapes, household artifacts, and folk costumes. In addition to village scenes, many of the images of persons are in anthropologically-styled poses.

Dates: 1940-1943 (Bulk)

Extents: Box type: Mixed                                      Pages:
          No. of boxes: 8                                        Linear feet: 2.97

Negative strips

Folders 1 through 145 are envelopes of negative strips. Folders 142 and 143 are of the visit from Governor-General of the Gouvernement, Hans Franck, in September 1941. Photos of museum objects, Zakopane graduates, and various family pictures are pictures of existing pictures and thus of lower quality. There are gaps in the envelope numbers.

Subseries 8, Haarskizzen

Scope and Content: Untitled, usually 2-sided typed form. Front contains data from anthropometric measurements and observations; the back, when pre-printed, has space for neck and rib cage curvature sketches and front and back view body outlines for hair coverage sketches. Wawrzenczyce run is 1-sided for sketches only. Pink-ish forms were used for women; tan forms were used for men. With a few exceptions, the sequences are complete and inclusive, 1.65 linear ft.

Subseries 11, Dermatoglyphic Data

Scope and Content: Three sets of dermatoglyphic data gathered in Szaflary by Dr. Fliethmann's group, German Golkowitz by Dr. Sydow's group and an unidentified location; the exact format varies by location. German Golkowitz data is on two sheets: one full-sized sheet with hand prints and one half-sized sheet with finger prints. Szaflary data are separated into finger and palm prints. Fingerprints are on half-sized sheets; the run encompasses the entire Szaflary investigation. Handprints are on mixed large and half sheets, depending on the age of the subject and size of the handprints, 0.99 linear ft.

Appendix 3: Original 1998 Finding Aid

INTRODUCTION

The Institut für Deutsche Ostarbeit (IDO) materials found in this collection appear to be from one of the seven sections of the Institut, the Section on Race and Ethnicity Research [Sektion Rassen- und Volkstumsforschung]. This assumption is based on the personal papers of staff members of the Section included in it and the close approximation of the research materials to published accounts of its work. There were three departments in the Section: Anthropology, Ethnology, and Jewish Research.

The IDO was designed to investigate and create policy for the Generalgouvernement (GG). The GG was created on October 26, 1939 simultaneously with the invasion of Poland. Hans Frank served as its “Reichsminister.” The Western part of Poland [Reichsgaue Danzig-Westpreussen and Wartheland] was assimilated into Germany, and the Polish population living in that area were forced into the GG, which comprised the Districts of Warsaw, Cracow, Radom and Lublin. After the invasion of the Soviet Union by German forces, Lemberg or Galizia was added to the GG (Weinmann, 1990, XXXVI).

The structure of the IDO’s was that of an independent Institut, not responsible for reporting to any ministry in Berlin (Goguel, 1964, 132.) It was under the direction of Hans Frank, the Generalgouverneur of the GG. He took great interest in the Institut and had ambitions for its academic prestige and involved himself with the administration of its work.

The purpose of the Section on Race and Ethnicity Research of the IDO, as explained in one of its earliest descriptions (Gottong, 1941), was to study the population of middle and eastern Europe. This area was believed to be comprised of various “racial strains” that, under the prevailing philosophy, should each be assessed according to the capabilities of its people to assist in the development of the “New Order” of Nazi Germany. Hitler in a speech before the Reichstag on October 6, 1939 gave anthropologists a particular task when he declared that there would be: “eine neue Ordnung der ethnographischen Verhältnisse, dass sich am Abschluss bessere Trennungslinien ergeben.” [a new order of ethnographic relationships, in order, finally, to produce better lines of division.] (Kundt, 1944, 53) These divisions would be based on the racial “Weltanschauung” or racial perspective of the Nazi party and would serve to group populations into identifiable entities, each with its own role in serving the needs of the German people (Arbeitsplan 1943, Box 1, Folder 7.)

The anthropologists of the IDO felt that their efforts would fill a gap left by earlier Polish anthropologists who had had, as Gottong (op.cit., 28) wrote, neither the courage nor the basic concepts of race, ethnicity, eugenics or race hygiene, to do this research. Further, German anthropologists could hope to justify their country’s annexation of Poland and other countries in middle and eastern Europe [“Lebensraum,” or living space] on the basis that this area was tied to the “Muttervolkes” [German folk] through “blood” and ethnicity. They hoped to establish the “Erblinien” or genetic lines of inheritance, in order to foster “Germanness” and eliminate “racial mixing.” Establishing and documenting all Germanic ties in the region also would further the political aims of the Nazi government (Gottong, 1941.)

At the time of the Institut's work, 1940-1944, Poles and others in Poland, indeed, were being divided into groups based on assigned identities. Under the direction of Heinrich Himmler, who was responsible for the GG, people of the region were resettled in towns and ghettos, and millions eventually were sent to death camps, into forced labor, or concentration camps in Germany. Many Poles, described by the invaders as an inferior group, were left in the G.G. with limited rights. Those who were found to be resisters were killed or sent to concentration camps in a punishment detail. Some people of the region were identified as "Volksdeutsch" and given papers legitimizing their identity as Germans, making the men eligible for conscription. The Section on Race and Ethnicity Research participated in the sorting process by providing the "scientific" rationale for "political decision-making." As a later director of the Section wrote of a meeting called by Heinrich Himmler in 1943:

"Die Volkstumsforschung stellt sich mit besonderer Initiative in den Dienst des grossen Auftrages, den der Führer dem Reichsführer SS, Reichskommissar für die Festigung deutschen Volkstums, Heinrich Himmler, übertragen hat, und schafft mit ihren wissenschaftlichen Ergebnissen die Grundlagen für seine die Zukunft des deutschen Volkes mitentscheidende Volkstumspolitik."

The (Section on) ethnicity research through its scientific findings takes a special initiative in creating the basis for the German people's decisive ethnic politics in the service of the great assignment that the Führer gave Heinrich Himmler, the SS Reichskommissar for Securing German Ethnicity. (Box 1, Folder 9)

The choice of subjects for study followed this outline of political goals. The collection described here reflects to a large extent the work of the Section, which the anthropologists viewed as multi-disciplinary (Plügel, 1941, 38). Biological, medical, social, and psychological characteristics of selected groups were recorded on questionnaires and other recording forms. Some population groups, like the Gorale and the Podhaler, were believed to be close to the Germans in ethnic heritage. Others, like the Jewish population of the ghetto in Tarnów and the various Polish and Ukrainians who were processed through the Kraków delousing center, were believed to be "Mongolian" in their characteristics or be of Slavic origin.

A dozen different questionnaires were used to gather information from subjects of their studies. Hair samples were taken from many different groups, the staff drew head circumferences of their subjects, sketched body hair on stick figures representing their subjects, and conducted psychological projective tests. Photographers took pictures of individual subjects and village scenes, buildings, and groups, as well as museum artifacts. While some of the data were summarized, no conclusions appear to have been made. Publications of the Section produced in Institut's journals until the end of its existence describe the research process, but few outcomes. Conclusions at the end of the Institut's existence were based on the same unsubstantiated suppositions as they were in the beginning.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection contains materials transferred from the United States War Department to the National Anthropological Archives (NAA) and the National Gallery of Art in 1947. Of the original seven cases, three were in the NAA when the current work began in February 1998. A memorandum dated February 13, 1947 addressed to Dr. Wetmore from Marshall T. Newman describes the potential importance of the collection. This memorandum is accompanied with an "Inventory of Material Collected by the Institut für Deutsche Ostarbeit in Eastern Europe, 1942-1944." This collection was not kept intact; personnel records and maps were sent to other Federal institutions.

The current collection contains:

- 1.) Anthropometric and morphologic data, hair samples, fingerprints, personal and family health inventories, and body hair sketches of individuals in various groups of people. There are a small number of psychological tests, as well. Some of the data were labeled according to place, date, and responsible researchers. Others were unlabeled and were not able to be identified.

- 2.) Genealogical records for populations residing in particular towns.
- 3.) Bibliographic cards from various sources with reference to the subjects most of interest to the Section on Race and Ethnicity Research. These include a wide range of literature on settlement patterns throughout the historical record, literature on art and scientific treasures of the region, literature on law and legal issues throughout several centuries, and other materials.
- 4.) Color slides of individuals (primarily from Zakopane and other Goralen areas). Unidentified slides of individuals holding signs with identification numbers (possibly from the Delousing Center in Cracow).
- 5.) Boxes of negatives of cultural artifacts and art treasures.
- 6.) Sociological and ethnological questionnaires of various kinds, most with identifying information.

The organization of the materials presented the authors with particular challenges. The crates in which the materials were housed were packed with smaller wrapped bundles, arranged in no particular order. It appeared that the materials had been boxed quickly and taken westward for safe keeping. Most administrative records had probably been destroyed. Only a few work reports and other documents were included.

It was decided to organize the materials by the descriptions of the work done by the Section on Race and Ethnicity Research in a way that reflected their work-plans and reports in their publications. Thus, rather than housing all hair samples together or each questionnaire by type, they are organized by locality in which the work was done. To the extent that information exists, the reasons for the choice of localities is provided.

The majority of written materials and all file titles are in German, there is a small number of Polish documents in the collection as well. Translations of file titles appear in brackets. If there was no identifying text with the materials placed in a particular folder, a short description of the contents is provided in English followed by the same description in German, both within brackets.

The collection is divided into several sections. Each is preceded by a short description of the materials and the rationale for their organization. Some series may contain incomplete numbered files.

SERIES 1: Various Papers From The Section on Race and Ethnicity / Sektion Rassen- und Volkstumsforschung. (Boxes 1-3)

Boxes 1, 2, and 3 contain various documents and papers from the offices of the Institut für Deutsche Ostarbeit. Box 1 consists of the contents of a notebook that had deteriorated and the cover of which was not retained in this collection. The cover of that notebook was photographed and is in the first folder. The rest of the contents appear in the order they were found. Three notebook dividers are included in Box 1. Boxes 2 and 3 contain other papers found among the collection. They do not include data from investigations, but rather reports, library orders, and notes of various kinds. These boxes include all the descriptions that were found in the collection of the mission of the Section and the working papers of its personnel.

The numbering system reflects the boxes and folders within them. The first number is that of the box and the second is that of the folder. Some boxes have no folders.

SERIES 2: Materials of a General Nature or Not Identifiable with any Particular Phase of Work from The Section on Race and Ethnicity Research.
(Boxes 4-24)

Many of the wrapped packages within the IDO crates that were loaned to the NAA from the War Department had no identification on them regarding where the materials had originated. For the most part, informants or subjects were given identification numbers, that can be grouped according to the towns in which the data were taken. Boxes 4 – 24 contain materials that are in question. For example, the bibliographic cards represent perhaps thousands of books and reference works that come from various collections. Some may be from libraries that were taken over by the invading Germans, while others may be personal bibliographic note cards for someone's use. All of the various data that the Section collected are represented here, but cannot be placed in a particular research effort.

Boxes 4 - 18

SERIES 3: Materials from the Investigations at the Delousing Center in Cracow. (Boxes 25-27)

The purpose of the investigations at the Delousing Center in Cracow was to examine men and women who were about to be sent into the Reich (Germany) in enforced labor battalions. The “racial” characteristics were of particular interest to the investigators, not only from a theoretical point of view, but because:

“von praktischem Interesse, als es sich hier um Menschen handelt, die mit unserem Volke in unmittelbare Berührung kommen und bei denen die Möglichkeit besteht, dass sie vereinzelt vielleicht im deutschen Volkstum aufgehen. Grade hier ist es also von grösster Wichtigkeit, die rassische Zusammensetzung dieser Menschen zu erfassen, um ein Eindringen fremder Rassenelemente in das deutsche Volk zu verhindern.”

...from a practical point of view, we are dealing with people here who will come into direct contact with our people and, therefore, the possibility exists that one or two of them could mix with German ethnics. For exactly that reason, it is even more important that we identify the racial characteristics of these people, in order to prevent the invasion of foreign racial elements into the German people.

SERIES 4: Materials from the Racial Investigations of Jews in the Tarnów Ghetto. (Boxes 28-29)

Tarnów had been a center of Polish Jewry, so it became a natural site for studies by the Racial Referat of the Section on Race and Ethnicity Research. Fifty-five percent of the population of Tarnów prior to WWII was Jewish. Measures were taken against Jews beginning in 1940, but the ghetto was not established until June 1942, just after the investigations of the IOD were completed. On June 11, 1942, 3500 Jews were deported to the death camp Bezcac and several hundreds more were murdered on the streets. On June 15, another ten thousand persons were deported to Belzec. By late 1943, Tarnów was declared “Judenrein” [free of Jews] (Gutman 1990, 1452). For the most part, informants or subjects were given identification numbers, that can be grouped according to the towns in which the data were taken.

Following racial investigations conducted by the University of Vienna of about 1000 Jews and part-Jewish families in that city, the Section on Race and Ethnicity Research began its own investigation of Jews in Tarnów. Of the 27,400 Jews in Tarnów, many had been brought from Vienna in transports. Two investigators from the IDO and two from Vienna led the investigation. They were given protection by the SS during their investigations (Fliethmann 1942).

For each family group of subjects, 18 head and 18 body measurements were taken. Finger and hand prints, as well as head circumferences were taken, according to the report of the research (Fliethmann op.cit., 93.) From March 23 to April 2, 1942, 106 families or 565 persons and 13 individuals were studied. Pictures of the head were taken from four perspectives and Dr. Fliethmann herself took pictures of the women without clothing. (Ibid)

The report of this investigation is limited to a collection of population numbers for the subjects and some remarks about their occupations. Concern with the numbers of the population were mitigated, as Dr. Fliethmann wrote: “Doch dürften sich die Verhältnisse in der letzten Zeit grundlegend geändert haben, so dass heute kaum noch von einem Bevölkerungswachstum zu reden sein wird.” [The conditions of the recent past are such that today one hardly needs to speak of a population increase.] (op.cit., 97) In a similar vein, another scientist in the ODA stated: “Daraus ergibt sich ein Fernziel der bevölkerungsmässigen Bereinigung dieses Raumes, das hier nur angedeutet zu werden braucht.” [There is a long-range goal of massive population cleansing in this region that only needs to be mentioned.] (Seraphim 1940, 63)

The full body pictures that were reported having been taken are not in this collection. Parts of other data may be found in the unidentified materials, but there is not enough evidence to place any of these data with this group of people.

SERIES 5: Material from the Racial and Ethnic Studies of People in the General Government Region / Generalgouvernement. (Boxes 30-74)

A major interest of the Section on Race and Ethnicity Research was the determination of racial characteristics in their subjects that could be traced to a German heritage. The scientists spent a great deal of effort in researching settlement patterns, migration routes, and living styles to establish for each group its congruence or incongruence with the Germans.

Several different populations are represented in this part of the collection. Box 30 has pictures and descriptions of the Polish “Baudienst.” This was a population of enforced laborers made up primarily of Poles and Ukrainians. Established in May 1940, this group of up to 8,000 men were to work on construction projects in Poland through the fall (Gottong 1941,3). Gottong reported that the group was racially mixed, with the racial characteristics of the eastern types predominating.

The men of the Sonderdienst, whose photos are also found in Box 30, had a special function in the GG. Founded in May 1940, the Sonderdienst was composed of men living in pre-WW II Poland who had German ancestry. They were allowed to carry weapons and performed duties for the Administration of the GG. In February 1941 they received extra training in weapons for “special duties” that they would be asked to carry out (Gottong 1942, 21). This group was found to have no trace of the “Mongolian or Asiatic race,” but were more “dinarischen” in their characteristics.

“In den Männern dieser Sonderdienstschule können wir Vertreter einer Bevölkerungsgruppe sehen, die in kleinen Lebensgemeinschaften über das fremdvölkische Gebiet des früheren polnischen Staates verteilt war, und deren Volks- und Rassenbewusstsein die Gefahr der Aufnahme fremder Bluts- und Rassenanteile wirksam abweisen konnte.”

In the men of the Sonderdienst, we can see a population group that was spread out over the foreign land of the former Polish state in small communities and who were conscious and careful of the foreign blood and racial mixing.

The other groups in this part of the collection represent two major divisions, according to the research plan of the Section on Race and Ethnicity Research. One division was a group of communities known as Goralen or Podhalern peoples. Simply put, Goralen refers to mountain people and Podhalern to those living at the foot of mountains. Both groups were believed to be descendants of early German settlers (Plügel, 1941, 54). Waves of German settlers, early as the Ninth Century, and in succeeding centuries, were believed to have come through the region leaving settlements and population groups. The researchers wanted to explore the extent to which German racial and social characteristics were still to be found, or to what extent racial mixing had erased them. The towns associated with the Goralen people are Witow, Szaflary, Borowa, Neu Sandez, Zakopane, Neumarkt. On the other hand, Weisenbring, and Hohenbach were located further west and were selected for comparison purposes to the Goralen populations. The Lemken areas, such as Wawrzencyce, Komancza, and Hanczowa were believed to have more Slavic populations. For the most part, informants or subjects were given identification numbers, that can be grouped according to the towns in which the data were taken.

Publications of the period show that more traditional ethnographic investigations took place in several Goralen towns, and the collection has pictorial and written descriptions in some detail of Zakopane and Szaflary. Psychological testing was conducted in several sites with the cooperation of the University of Marburg, Germany.

Appendix 4: Addendum to Original 1998 Finding Aid

This part of the collection consists of slides and pictures taken around the area of Zakopane in southern Poland. It includes pictures of buildings and architecture taken in situ and pictures of artifacts taken from ethnographic museums, already in place before the Nazi occupation of Poland. No accession notes accompanied this part of the collection.

- a) Envelope with 12 pictures of a village. This envelope has a note on it written by staff at the National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institution, identifying the pictures as originating from the IDO. It includes 2 pictures of an underground opening (possible a storage cellar), 3 pictures of a small girl on a village road, 2 pictures of a mother holding a baby in a doorway, two women at the side of a house, a young man in front of a house, a priest with a child in front of a house, a woman (possibly a staff member of the IDO) holding what appears to be a gate latch, and a view of the proximity of houses in a settlement or village.

Umschlag mit 12 Bildern aus einem Dorf. Dieser Umschlag hat eine Notiz, geschrieben von einem Mitarbeiter beim National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institution, die diese Bilder identifizieren als Originale vom IDO. Dabei sind 2 Bilder von einem geöffneten Keller (wahrscheinlich ein Vorratskeller), 3 Bilder von einem kleinen Mädchen an einer Dorfstrasse, 2 Bilder von einer Mutter mit Baby auf dem Arm in einem Torweg, zwei Frauen an der Hausseite, ein junger Mann vor einem Haus, ein Priester mit Kind vor einem Haus, eine Frau (wahrscheinlich Mitarbeiterin vom IDO) hält anscheinend eine Türklinke und ein Blick auf ein nahes Haus in einer Siedlung oder einem Dorf.

- b) 18 pictures of Polish household artifacts and examples of household ethnic art.

18 Bilder von polnischen Haushaltsgegenständen und Exemplaren aus dem Haushalt in Volkskunst-Anfertigung.

75.3 Booklet of photos of wooden ware, weaving, costumes, architecture and miscellaneous objects. This booklet was assembled by an unknown individual while the collection was housed at the National Museum of American History from original pictures in the IDO collection for a project on Polish art. It is not always accurate in its German headings or translations. This collection is thought to be a part of the IDO's documentation of Polish artifacts as described in their files, publications, and correspondence. Corrections follow:

- Page 15: Tonlämpchen (Clay lamps)

Kleines Buch mit Photos von Holzwaren, Flechtwaren, Kleidungen, Architekturen und verschiedenartigen Objekten. Dieses kleine Buch war zusammengestellt von einer unbekanntem Person während die Sammlung untergebracht war beim National Museum of American History. Es sind Originalbilder aus einem Teil der IDO-Sammlung für das Projekt "Dokumentation über Polnische Volkskunst.", wie das hervorgeht aus Hinweisen in anderen Heftordnern, Publikationen und Briefen. Die deutschen Bezeichnungen in diesem Büchlein sind nicht immer exakt, deshalb hier folgende Korrekturen.

- Seite 1: Bärenplastik Bienenstock

- Seite 2: Holzzirkel
- Seite 10: Schutzhaus
- Seite 15: Lämpchen aus Ton
